Dr. Treptow

Thank you for your note. I'm glad to address your question (below) to Dr. Anderson.

As an overview of APA's 2013 budget, funding for APA's operations comes primarily from our publications and products ($87.8 million, 76% of total income) and membership dues ($11.3 million, 10%). Other major sources of income include our convention ($2.9 million, 2%), rents from our real estate ($3.5 million, 3%), accreditation fees ($3.9 million, 3%), advertising in APA publications (print and electronic; $2.6 million, 2%) and grants and contracts ($2.4 million, 2%). None of our grants or contracts comes from the Department of Defense (DOD).

With respect to funds from the DOD for the Ethics Office, in 2013 the only funding is for $10,000 to the Ethics Office for two ethics training courses for military psychologists. Each year the office gives educational programs to a variety of programs/organizations and in a variety of venues both domestically and internationally, and certain of these programs/organizations provide honoraria and/or reimburse expenses in return. The honoraria also allow the Ethics Office to give programs for groups that cannot afford to pay. The honorarium from DOD represents 1.2% of the Ethics Office direct expense budget ($848,183).

With respect to other parts of central APA, the DOD does not provide funding for any other activities. As many employers of psychologists do, DOD does purchase ads for employment in our Monitor on Psychology magazine. Also, the DOD pays accreditation fees for training programs, pays fees to be a continuing education sponsor, and purchases APA products.

I hope this addresses your concerns. If you have additional questions please do not hesitate to direct them to me at the contact information below.

Dear Dr. Anderson,

I regretfully see that I have not yet responded to your kind answer to my query about your interests in peace psychology; nor have I acknowledged your stated pleasure regards meeting me at sometime in person. Thank you very much for both remarks; it would likewise be of pleasure for me to meet you: I am at APA 2014 so perhaps our paths may cross.

As it happens, I have another matter of inquiry just now. The question has arisen in a discussion with colleagues as to the degree (e.g., money amount; percentage of funding) that APA as an organization (and the APA Ethics Office as a branch/department within the larger whole) is funded by the Department of Defense. One might hope 0%; but perhaps that is unrealistic? As a 501-3c non-profit, I seem to recall that financial records are open public transactions; is that correct? In any case, might you be able to steer me in the direction as to where answers regards this conundrum as to sources of APA's funding might lie? I would be most appreciative of any and all help.

Most sincerely yours,

Dr. Robin Lynn Treptow
